

Tierra Del Sol Country Club and Golf Course raises the roof on the Las Palmas Villas

An old Dutch tradition was observed on Friday afternoon, June 30, when management of Tierra Del Sol and Konstruktiva builders conducted a spantenbier at the Las Palmas subdivision of the golf community in Malmok. When placing the highest point (spanten) on a building it is an Dutch and Aruban tradition to pour some beer on it, and for the construction crew to consume quite a bit at the same time in celebration. The Director of Konstruktiva, Alex Louvera, conducted that time-honored ritual along with Tierra Del Sol management, both of whom had warm words of praise for the crew that worked tirelessly to help keep the project on schedule.

Ann Brown, General Manager of Tierra Del Sol credited not only Alex, but in particular, the resort's project manager Juan Ramon Rymer with doing an excellent job and Alex concurred. Juan, in turn, singled out Alexei Salazar, the project supervisor for Konstruktiva for commendation in keeping his crew productive. Both Alex and Juan felt that all the construction crew deserved a pat on the back for a job well done.

The Tierra Del Sol Las Palmas Villas consists of twenty – seven units within eighteen buildings of various sizes and styles. There are six different models single family homes, and two and three family townhouses in Las Palmas is the fifth section of condominiums to be added to the resort's grounds, and the sales department reports that only three units remain of the villas that will be completed in spring, 2007. Reservations are now available for Las Palmas 2, which is expected to be under construction very soon, and according to Ann Brown, the Las Palmas villas offer the finest views, overlooking the coast and the golf course, and providing a breathtaking vista to wake up to every morning. Congratulations to the crew for a job well done, more information about Tierra Del Sol villas can be obtained at their website www.tierradelsol.com.